Sommelier Wine Awards 'Italian Merchant of the Year' 2013 - 2020

"Eurowines' selection of Gold and Silver medal-winning wines together make for a highly impressive selection that covers almost every style a restaurant would need from the country."

Sommelier Wine Awards 2013

"If Italy is important to your list, you should be talking to these guys"

Sommelier Wine Awards 2014

"Eurowines' influence (at the Sommelier Wine Awards) has grown over the last few years, from 22 Medals in 2013 to 28 last year and 36 in 2015. Interestingly, it achieves its success in SWA mostly outside the 'classic' vineyards of Tuscany, regularly unearthing terrific regional gems at impressive prices. But there was plenty of dreamy high-priced sommelier-bait too, and if we were putting together a Gold List of twice the size, many of these Silver Medal winners would have made it on, no question."

Sommelier Wine Awards 2015

"Once more Eurowines hog the Italian limelight, with all bar one of its eight Golds and two out of its three Trophies being from Italy. From a well-priced Prosecco, a Trophy-winning white from Lake Garda to the slopes of Mount Etna in the south, via must-stocks such as Valpolicella and Barolo, Eurowines has the Italian factor covered."

Sommelier Wine Awards 2016

"Eurowines has totally made this award its own. This, incredibly, was the fifth year running that it's claimed Italian Merchant of the Year. Eurowines is a merchant with a very clear speciality and remains a company whose heart is very firmly rooted in Italy".

Sommelier Wine Awards 2017

"Can anyone find a way to knock Eurowines off its Italian perch? Well, not on this evidence".

Sommelier Wine Awards 2018

"Many merchants send in large numbers of Italian wines, so the Italian Merchant award is given out almost every year. In fact, to be more specific, it is given to Eurowines almost every year. This was the London outfit's seventh such award in a row".

Sommelier Wine Awards 2019

"Italy is always one of SWA's biggest categories and it seems to be one that several merchants specialise in, so we tend to give out this award every year. This, incredibly, is the eighth year in a row that Eurowines has won it! Yes, Italy is its speciality, but it's one it does really well. Despite being a relatively small merchant, it had more medals from Italy than anybody else, which shows there's some top-class selection – both of estates and wines – going on. It's strongest in the North – over half its medals came from the North-East or North-West – but it seems to find interesting examples from the centre and South, too. Only Tuscany – on this year's evidence – seems to be rather quiet. As impressive as the number of medals this year was the pricing. Half of its medals and all but two of its Golds were under £15, which is a better performance than last year."

Alto Adige

Alto Adige could be described as one of the least known but most notable wine regions of Italy. Located at the very top of the country bordering Austria, the 'U' shaped glacial valley has distinct Germanic and Austrian influences. As a gateway to Italy, Alto Adige was an important area for the Romans, the Austro-Hungarian Empire and only became part of Italy in 1919. There are three official languages; Italian, German and Ladin.

Due to its geographical nature, the vineyards in Alto Adige tend to be situated on steep slopes. Indeed the area is so mountainous only 15% of the region is suitable for cultivation (around 13,000 hectares). The unique location does however, allow white varietals to flourish – the Pinot Grigio is possibly among the best in the world, easily competing with Austrian Grüner Veltliner and German Riesling.

The climate and position also permits the growth of grape varieties not usually seen in other parts of Italy; Müller Thurgau, Gewürztraminer, Riesling, Sylvaner, Schiava, Teroldego and Lagrein, an ancient varietal that dates back to the 1500's. Soil composition in the region ranges from rocky minerals to volcanic deposits and slate.

San Michele Appiano

Established in 1907, the San Michele Appiano winery is today considered to be one of the best wineries in Alto Adige and Italy. It presently has 320 members, 390 hectares of vineyard and produces 2.5 million bottles every year.

The winery is in the fortunate position to have at its disposal some of the best vineyards in and around Appiano and along the Alto Adige Wine Road.

The Sanct Valentin range is the cru line of San Michele Appiano. The vines are between 20 and 40 years old and are in the heart of the traditional Eppan white wine area. These vineyards are at an altitude of between 400 and 620 metres above sea level with a South to South-eastern exposure.

In 2024 Jakob Gasser was appointed winemaker at St. Michael Eppan Winery. Jakob's respect for tradition and focus on sustainability represents the synthesis of innovation, tradition and respect for nature that will shape the future of St Michael Eppan.

Veneto

Located in north-eastern Italy, Veneto is among the largest wine-producing regions, both for DOC and IGT wines. It made Italian wine popular around the world with its Valpolicella, Soave, Amarone and Prosecco. The importance of winemaking in this region is emphasised by the creation of the very first Italian school for vine growing and oenology dating back to 1885. In addition, Veneto was the first region to constitute a "strada del vino", or "wine road." This first wine-touring road featured special road signs providing information on vines and the wines they were made into, and joined the Valdobbiadene and Conegliano DOC zones crossing a series of hilly vineyards.

The Po Valley covers 57% of Veneto. This valley consists of a plain extending from the mountains to the Adriatic Sea, the lower section being a mainstay of agricultural production. The rich soil in this region is full of silt and sand, with clay and calcareous debris. Veneto is protected from the harsh northern European climate by the Alps, the foothills of which form the region's northern extremes. These cooler climates are well-suited to white varieties like Garganega while the warmer Adriatic coastal plains and river valleys are where the renowned Valpolicella, Amarone and Bardolino DOC reds are produced.

Veneto's growers are among the most modernised in Italy. While most of the classic wines from this region are based on native grape varieties like Glera and Verduzzo, high demand for Veneto wines in the European and US markets has prompted the region's producers to experiment with Cabernet, Chardonnay and Pinot varieties.

CAMPAGNOLA
DAL 1907

Campagnola

Situated in Valgatara, the centre of the Valpolicella production zone, the Campagnola winery was founded in 1907 by Giuseppe Campagnola, who initiated a tradition of excellent value and quality which is flourishing to this day.

The founder's grandson and namesake, Giuseppe now runs the recently renovated winery along with his sons Andrea and Paolo. Together, they have created a portfolio of wines not only from the Veneto but from regions as far afield as Puglia.

Despite already producing an excellent Amarone, Giuseppe decided to push the boundaries further and make a Cru of truly exceptional quality. This culminated in an Amarone of immense character and depth, which he named Caterina Zardini in honour of his late grandmother. This wine, along with its baby sister 'Caterina Zardini Valpolicella DOC Classico Superiore', has firmly established itself as the jewel in the Campagnola portfolio and is consistently internationally awarded for quality and character.

CANTINA DI CUSTOZA
– 1968 –

Cantina di Custoza

Cantina di Custoza was founded in 1968 by 83 winegrowers and today has 227 members who contribute grapes from over 1,000 hectares of south-facing vineyards that are located on the hills and foothills south and southwest of Lake Garda.
The terrains are glacial moraines composed primarily of limestone, gravel and sand. The climate is mild and temperate.
The fresh and fruity 'Classica' range offers great 'food' wines, whilst the newly packaged 'Val dei Molini' range takes its name from one of the most charming valleys in the Veneto and is part of the Cantina's ongoing 'quality project'. The range is completed with the premium 'Custodia' selection: the name comes from Custoza's ancient name as custodian of the territory.

SOLIGO
DAL 1957

Cantina Colli di Soligo

Located midway between Conegliano and Valdobbiadene, the Cantina Colli del Soligo was formed in 1957 by a group of local vine growers who were united by their love for Prosecco and their land.
Soligo's vineyards are located on the gentle slopes which were once glacial sea beds, rich in sediment minerals from the glaciers melting away.
This ideal location between the sea and the Alps has a temperate climate, perfect for enhancing primary aromas in grapes.
The co-operative now has a total of 600 partners and produces 15,000 tons of grapes a year.
All Soligo wines have a very distinctive personality, particularly the Spumantes.

Friuli - Venezia Giulia

Located at the most north-eastern point of Italy, Friuli-Venezia Giulia is an autonomous region with a rich history given its geographic, ethnic, and cultural location as a frontier hub between central Europe to the north, the Slavic regions to the east, and the Italian Peninsula to the west and south. The winemaking history of the Friuli-Venezia Giulia has been strongly influenced by the history of the Friuli and Venezia Giulia regions, which were important stops along the Mediterranean spice route from the Byzantine Empire to the trading centre of Venice.

Friuli-Venezia Giulia is very mountainous in the north, and gives way to flatter terrain and plains near the sea. The climate is distinguished by warm days and chilly nights which help to maintain a balance in grape acidity and sugar levels, allowing the grapes a long, slow growing season. Harvest normally takes place in September. The soils of the region vary from the calcium rich sandstone in the more hilly regions to clay, sand, and gravel in the valley.

Most of the vineyards of Friuli-Venezia Giulia are located in the southern half of the region, including the large wine regions of Collio Goriziano, Colli Orientali del Friuli, Isonzo and Carso. The Lison-Pramaggiore region is shared with Veneto. Smaller regions such as the Annia, Aquileia, Grave and Latisana are located in the central and western part of the region around the city of Pordenone. These smaller regions are located on alluvial plains with soils composed of gravel and sand. Drawing from native grape varieties as well as the international array, Friulians have applied studied vineyard techniques and avant-garde oenology to the production of highly distinctive whites, as well as some attractive reds. Though wine production represents only 2% of the Italian output, the white wines from Collio are considered amongst the best in Italy.

Friuli - Venezia Giulia

Livon

Situated in San Giovanni al Natisone, the Livon winery was established in 1964 when Dorino Livon purchased his first piece of land in the Collio.
With a philosophy of 'Quality above all else', he began to make wine that truly reflected the diversity of the region's grape varieties and terroir.
Dorino's sons, Valneo and Tonino, joined their father in the late 1980's and through continuous acquisition, have transformed Livon into the largest family owned winery in Collio. The third generation of the Livon family are now joining their fathers ensuring the future of the company is in safe hands.
Today the estate comprises 263 hectares and 2 wineries located in Masarotte and Venco. Each winery is equipped with the most modern winemaking facilities and barrique ageing cellars thus allowing the winemakers to express the surrounding vineyard's individual characteristics to the full.
The Livon family celebrated their 50th Anniversary by launching the 'Selezioni 50 Annivewrsaio, Collio DOC' in 2014. A blend of the two ancient, indigenous grape varieties, Friulano and Ribolla Gialla, representing the very best of the Collio region.

The premise for superior quality

The winged woman is the unmistakable trademark of Livon, sought after by those who want to experience both an exceptional wine and a unique land: Friuli. A blessed land where ancient native varieties of grapes, unique in the whole world, flourish, and where wine is not only a pleasure on the palate, but also a millennial tradition.

FRIULI 1915

San Simone

Located in Rondover, near Porcia, in the most western part of DOC Friuli Grave and central part of DOC Prosecco, the San Simone winery was founded in 1915. It takes its name from the 14th century chapel that is situated opposite the property.
The vineyards are located in the Friuli Grave DOC and Prosecco DOC areas, in the municipalities of Porcia, Azzano Decimo and Pasiano.
The Brisotto family have now owned the winery for four generations and today Chiara, Anna and Antonio Brisotto continue to make wine of great character. They are promoters of modern viticulture based on low grape yields, concentrating on sustainable viticulture in order to contribute to the environment.

DOC Friuli Grave

Between the provinces of Pordenone and Udine, straddling the Tagliamento river extends a natural landscape of striking originality: the "grave", generated by the large alluvial fans of the rivers Meduna, Cellina, and Tagliamento. In the northern part, they are characterized by a coarse terrain, which along the coast line becomes fine.

Lombardy

The winemaking tradition of Lombardy dates back to its settlement by Greeks from Athens along the Po River. Today, Lombardy is considered the industrial and commercial capital of Italy and the gateway to Europe. The region annually produces over 125 million litres of wine.

Lombardy is well-known for its sparkling wines made in the Franciacorta and Oltrepò Pavese areas. The Valtellina zone produces many notable wines using a local version of the Nebbiolo variety. The stony soil composition of the region helps to retain heat that is released during the evening to warm the vines.

While the weather of Lombardy is varied, the region is generally considered a cool continental climate and is influenced by several geographic features that control the temperature and terroir of the land. These include the Alps located in the northern parts of the region near the wine producing area of Valtellina and the Po River, which runs along the Oltrepò Pavese and forms most of the region's southern border with Emilia-Romagna. Many wine areas are located near some of Lombardy's major lakes, including Franciacorta near Lake Iseo as well as the Garda Bresciano and Garda Mantovano regions near Lake Garda. To the west of Lombardy is the Piedmont wine region, to the south is Emilia-Romagna and to the east are the Trentino-Alto Adige/Südtirol and Veneto wine regions.

Piedmont

One of the most famous wine regions of Italy, Piedmont's name translates to "at the foot of the Mountain", and the stunning views are adequately matched by the wines and food of the region.

Located in the foothills of the Alps, Piedmont forms its border with France and Switzerland. In addition to its mountainous terrain, the Po Valley also consumes a large area of Piedmont, leaving only 30% of the region suitable for vineyard plantings. The valley and mountains both contribute to the area's noted fog cover that aides in the ripening of the Nebbiolo grape (which gets its name from the Piedmontese word "nebbia" meaning "fog").

The Piedmont wine region has a colder, continental winter climate and significantly lower rainfall due to the rain shadow effect of the Alps. Soil in the region is primarily clay based with calcium and mineral deposits. Vineyards are typically planted on hillsides at altitudes between 150-400 metres. The warmer, south facing slopes are primarily used for Nebbiolo or Barbera whilst the cooler sites are planted with Dolcetto or Moscato.

Over the last 20 years winemaking has concentrated predominantly on quality against quantity (from 92,000 hectares to 52,000 hectares of vineyards), and on local grape varieties. Today Piedmont includes 17 DOCG zones and an impressive total of 42 DOC zones.

CORDERO
DI
MONTEZEMOLO
proprietà dal 1340

Cordero di Montezemolo

The Cordero di Montezemolo estate lies in the heart of the Langhe district of Alba.
The Montezemolos are descendants of the Falletti family whose lineage and presence in Monfalletto can be traced back to medieval times.
The majority of the family's vineyards are located in the Annunziata district near the town of La Morra which is the most famous of the eleven communes that collectively form the Barolo wine zone.
The Estate is dominated by an ancient Cedar of Lebanon tree which rests at the top of the hill overlooking the vineyards, a view now enjoyed from the ultra-modern tasting room.
By no means traditionalists, the Montezemolo family produce intensely powerful wines to international acclaim. The wines regularly score highly in publications such as Wine Spectator, who included no less than three Montezemolo wines in their Top 100 Wines of 2014.
The impressive expansion over the last few years of both the barrique cellar and state-of-the-art tasting room has been coupled with the adoption of low environmental impact practices throughout the vineyards. In 2013, the family began the process for organic certification.

Barolo Enrico VI

Barolo Enrico VI originates from an exceptional and unique vineyard considered to be amongst the best for the appellation, occupying an area of two hectares at 300 metres in the municipality of Castiglione Falletto. This vineyard which is set in iron rich soil with vines that are over 50 years old and exposed to the south west in a climate that is cooler and less ventilated. The Barolo Enrico VI displays a strong personality in the palate with earthiness and prominent mentholated notes, but at the same time an abundance of soft and sweet tannins.

CA' DEL BAIO

Ca' del Baio

Located in the town of Treiso, in the province of Cuneo in the Langhe region, Ca' del Baio was founded in 1929 by Giuseppe Grasso and is today managed by his great-grandson Giulio, his wife Luciana and their three daughters Paola, Valentina and Federica. Ca' del Baio owns today 28 HA of vineyards property located in Treiso, Barbaresco and Trezzo Tinella (Alta Langa region) where Giulio planted in 2015 the youngest vines of Riesling, Moscato and Chardonnay.

The Nebbiolo, which is destined for the Barbaresco DOCG is divided into 3 crus (single vineyards bottling): Vallegrande, Asili and Pora. Vallegrande and Asili have the RISERVA version too with two more years of ageing.

Since 2014 they have started producing a "multi-cru"Barbaresco, collecting together the fruits of three Nebbiolo vineyards according to the Langa tradition. It is the Barbaresco Autinbej. The winery production philosophy is based on eco-sustainability and respect of each vine and plants and it adherates to the green experience certification and project : https://www.thegreenexperience.it/.

The wines of Ca' del Baio are born out of this close relationship. Over the years, Ca' del Baio has acquired a prominent position in the world of Barbaresco, once known simply as Barolo's 'Little Brother' but today gaining a worldwide appreciation and admiration. The family's reputation was recently raised even higher with Giulio awarded 'Viticulturist of the Year' at the Gambero Rosso, Vini d'Italia 2016.

Dezzani

It is from a passion for the land and for wine that, in 1934, the ancestor Dezzani founded the historic winery, which was initially dedicated to the local production and commercialization of grapes. The enthusiasm passed down to his son Romolo was the key to the success achieved during the 1970s and 1980s, when the more structured Dezzani ventured beyond the borders of Piedmont, becoming known throughout the national territory and establishing itself as a reference point for Piedmontese typicity. The third-generation continued Romolo's philosophy, spreading the Dezzani brand to international markets. Today, the historical entity is leaded by the Rocca family, who have been in the wine world for five generations, and by Villa Rivalta (hundreds of families united in cooperative form, with about 1,000 hectares of vineyards). Together, they develop significant synergies through supply chain control, modern technologies, and the love of those who have lived wine for centuries.

Deltetto

The Deltetto family roots have been firmly grounded in Roero since the late 19th century. The current generation's grandfather Carlo Deltetto founded the winery at its present site in Canale in 1953 and the Deltetto' s have been important protagonists in the birth of the Roero appellation, that recognizes the value of Arneis and Nebbiolo vines, in a terroir particularly suited to these varieties. Deltetto have also been significant in developing the Favorita grape, making a delicately aromatic white, comparable to Vermentino from Liguria. The fossil drawings on the cru range of wines, symbolize the sandstone, sand and limestone soils rich in minerals and remnants of it marine origins. Deltetto are today forging the way forward in sparkling wine production and the Alta Langa DOC from the range is regarded as one of the best examples of this appellation.

Berta® DISTILLERIE

Berta Distillerie

With a rich history spanning four generations, the Berta family has been producing grappa since the beginning of the 20th century. The first distillery in Nizza Monferrato was constructed in 1947, and quickly became internationally renowned for the quality of its products.
The Berta family constantly strives for innovation in their distillery whilst maintaining the same spirit of quality. With years of intense work and research they have produced exceptional grappas, aged in the finest oak barrels and sold in beautifully designed bottles. Although their grappas are made following ancient traditions, they gave them a modern twist; rich in aromas, with softness and balsamic sensations on the palate.
As the business expanded, more space was needed and the Berta family moved back to where their great grandfather Francesco transformed the business, engaging in all aspects of the wine and grappa industry. The modern state-of-the-art Roccanivo distillery at Casalotto di Mombaruzzo opened in the grape harvest of 2002, a historic vintage for this family and the business.

Emilia Romagna

Emilia-Romagna, located in Northern Italy, is comprised of the former regions of Emilia and Romagna. Bologna, the region's capital, acts as a dividing line between the two regions. Emilia occupies the western sector, while Romagna lies to the east of Bologna and stretches all the way to the Adriatic Sea. Nearly half of the region (48%) consists of plains while 27% is hilly and 25% is mountainous. The soil in the region is made up of limestone, which allows the vines planted there to thrive. The wines of the two areas are quite different from those of their neighbouring regions.

In Romagna, wine is made primarily from the Sangiovese, Trebbiano, and Albana grape varieties. Albana di Romagna was the first white wine to obtain the DOCG in 1987, and is usually dry and still with a distinctive almond undertone and finish. The best known grape of this area, however, is Sangiovese - a robust red with pronounced fruity flavours. It is becoming increasingly more popular for producers of Sangiovese to make superior reserve wines with greater depth of bouquet and flavour, capable of aging gracefully.

In Emilia the most famous wine is Lambrusco, a sparkling red grown in the DOC zones of Modena and Reggio Emilia, which in its authentic dry style is not often seen outside of Italy. Most exported Lambrusco is sweet, or 'amabile,' and often low in alcohol.

In 1938 Otello Ceci owned a busy and vibrant “trattoria” near Parma in Emilia, selling the local speciality cured meats like Culatello, accompanied by deeply coloured glasses of Lambrusco. He decided to start making his own wine in 1939, and was soon courted by the top 400 grape growers in the area to have their fruit pressed by him. Today’s modern cellar was built in the nineties and is currently run by Otello’s grandchildren, who have made Ceci a multi award winning point of reference for the highest quality Lambrusco.

Tuscany

Located in central Italy along the Tyrrhenian coast, Tuscany is home to some of the world's most renowned wine regions. With a rich history dating back to Etruscan times, wine making has been celebrated in local literature and art throughout all significant periods of the region.

Boasting hilly terrain and a warm, Mediterranean climate, Tuscany has ideal growing conditions for grapes, the most notable of which is the Sangiovese variety. Soil composition ranges from hard and stony, to rich in clay. The majority of the region's vineyards are found at altitudes of 150–500 metres, as the grapes perform better when they receive direct sunlight. The higher elevations also increase the daily temperature variation, helping the grapes maintain their balance of sugars and acidity as well as their aromatic qualities.

Tuscany has many notable wines, the most famous being Brunello di Montalcino, Vino Nobile di Montepulciano, Carmignano, and of course Chianti and Chianti Classico. In the 1970s, high quality wines made outside of DOC/DOCG regulations called "Super Tuscans" emerged. These wines commanded high prices and have since become world-renowned. As the trend of creating high quality non-DOC wines spread to other regions of Italy, the classification system was modified in order to include Super Tuscans as DOC/DOCG Chianti. Many producers have adopted these classifications, though some producers still prefer to use the less-restrictive IGT classification Toscana.

CAMIGLIANO

Camigliano

The village of Camigliano can trace its origins back to Etruscan times. It flourished during the Middle Ages with a local economy dedicated mainly to the cultivation of grapes and olives.
Walter Ghezzi bought the farm in 1957. The oldest vineyards date back to 1959 and the first vintage of Brunello was produced in 1965. Today, the estate extends to over 530 hectares, of which 92 are planted with vines. Of these, 50 hectares of vineyard to the south of Montalcino, are planted with the renowned Sangiovese Grosso, used to make Brunello and Brunello Riserva.
The hand harvested grapes are taken to a winery, where wine is designed to move by gravity, avoiding the damaging shock of mechanical pumps. The Ghezzi family care deeply about the environment, and have ensured the building of the modern winery was mostly underground, blending in with the beautiful countryside.

ARGENTIERA
BOLGHERI

Argentiera

Argentiera is located on the Tuscan coast, on the southernmost edge of the prestigious Bolgheri DOC appellation. Once part of the historic Tenuta di Donoratico estate, today Argentiera is owned by Stanislaus Turnauer.

Argentiera enjoys a distinctive position within Bolgheri. Its vineyards rise from the lower slopes up to approximately 210 metres above sea level, overlooking the Mediterranean and lying just 2 km from the coast. Constant maritime breezes moderate temperatures, preserve freshness and contribute to the wines' characteristic elegance, finesse and Mediterranean character.

The vineyards reveal a remarkable diversity of soils. At lower elevations, sandier soils produce wines with vibrant fruit and a distinctive savoury character. Further uphill, clay, limestone and calcareous soils bring structure, depth and complexity. This combination of altitude, maritime influence and diverse soils creates wines that balance concentration with freshness and refined elegance.

Today, Argentiera produces top-class wines recognised by the Italian and international wine press, expressing the distinctive character of this exceptional corner of the Tuscan coast.

BADIA DI MORRONA

Badia di Morrona

The famous Tuscan grape variety Sangiovese has been cultivated in the stunning rolling countryside surrounding the village of Morrona since Etruscan times.

A tradition continued from 1000 AD by the Benedictine monks who produced wine at the Badia di Morrona (or the Abbey of Morrona) and revived by the Gaslini family who have devoted their care, attention and expertise to creating wines to express the unique terroir of Terricciola for three generations.

Acquiring the Abbey in 1939 in this historic area which lies roughly 30km south east of Pisa, today over half of the 110 hectares of vineyards are dedicated purely to the Sangiovese grape which, although difficult to grow, thrives in its native soil remaining faithful to the family's approach to the production of wine and their taste for 'territory'.

That said, Cabernet, Syrah and Merlot excel here too, developing character and personality with a Tuscan identity.

There's no science fiction involved in the winemaking here, the cellars contain only that which is strictly necessary and is utilized merely to draw forth the maximum which the soil has managed to transmit to the grapes.

Located in the countryside around Lucarelli in the Municipality of Radda in Chianti, this property belongs to Valneo and Tonino Livon. The previous owners used the property as a holiday retreat and made wine there for friends and family. The total property is 30 hectares, 15 of which are cultivated with vineyards. The Livon brothers are applying the same philosophy of quality and respect for terroir that has brought them so much success in the Friuli, to this small holding. The results of their efforts are visible in the outstanding quality of both the Chianti and Chianti Riserva.

Marche

Dating back to Etruscan times, Marche's wine making history has long been influenced both by its culture and its climate. Located in central Italy between the Apennine Mountains and the Adriatic Sea, the region has a number of terroirs which are suitable for grape cultivation. Clay and limestone-rich soils contribute to this distinctive terroir and vary according to the changing topography. From the rolling coastal hills and the influence of the mountain chains and rivers, producers in Marche have both warm and cool climates to utilise.

The Marche's vineyards cover 25,000 hectares and produce almost two million hectolitres of wine annually. The majority of this is sold as table wine or under the title IGT Marche, with about 20% sold under the region's 15 DOC and 5 DOCG titles. The majority of DOC classifications in Marche cover both red and white wines.

Known primarily as a white-wine region, the amount of whites and reds produced in Marche are actually almost equal. The main regional white is Verdicchio, a dry, characteristically flavoured wine made from at least 85% of the grape with the same name. The Marche has grown the Verdicchio grape for over 600 years, with the finest expressions of the wine found in the DOCGs Verdicchio dei Castelli di Jesi and Verdicchio di Matelica. Among the red wines, the finest are typically made from Montepulciano and Sangiovese grapes, the most known wines from these being Rosso Conero and Rosso Piceno.

Casalfarneto

Casalfarneto is a family owned, independent wine producer. With its 35 hectares of vineyard, CasalFarneto combines technology, tradition and sustainability to produce wines of excellence. Under the shade of “Farneto oaks”, from which the Estate gets its name, the farmhouse boasts the cultivation of white and red grapes with particular focus on the Verdicchio, a DOC white wine, praised by oenologists and sommeliers for its tasteful character. The company was founded in 1995 by Danilo Solustri, and a new winery was built in 2005. A few years later, the winery began to receive recognition from top publications such as Vinous, Gambero Rosso, Bibenda and others. In 2018 Paolo Togni, a local businessman, decided to step out from the Togni Group and concentrate on the development of Casalfarneto winery.

Umbria

With its central location, Umbria is one of the smallest regions of Italy and is considered to be home to some of the country's earliest inhabitants. Similar in climate to Tuscany, Umbria has cold, rainy winters and dry, sunny summers. The soils of the region are made up of calcareous clay and sand. Due to Umbria's hilly terrain, many vineyard plantings are done along terraces which are cut into the hillsides – hence the name 'colli' (translated into 'hill') seen in many of the region's DOC names.

Umbria's wine production is limited; it produces less than a third of neighbouring Tuscany, and is the fourth smallest wine producing region in Italy. What Umbria lacks in quantity, however, it makes up for in quality. Known primarily for its white wines, the Orvieto DOC is one of the best appreciated wines and accounts for 80% of overall wine production. Mostly found in the dry variety, in the town of Orvieto it can be found in the Abboccato (semi-sweet) variety.

While the region is most noted for its white wines, both of Umbria's DOCGs are for red wines. There are a total of 13 DOCs as well, and while there isn't a large percentage of a wine produced at DOC level, this is steadily on the rise. Investments in practice have allowed for many high-quality new wines such as Cabernet Sauvignons, Merlots, and Chardonnays to become available. Due to their affordable prices compared to similar wines in Tuscany, they have attracted considerable interest locally and internationally.

LUNGAROTTI

RADICI IN UMBRIA

Lungarotti

During the 1960s Giorgio Lungarotti planted the town of Torgiano, and indeed Umbria, firmly on the world wine landscape. The family name is today an icon of the region, and Italian wine making. Through the decades, Giorgio based the success of his business on a strong bond with his land and a search for quality, which also provided environmental sustainability. Lungarotti own 250 hectares of vineyards split between Torgiano and Montefalco. They implement innovative cultivation techniques based on sustainability and respect for the environment. Vine densities are optimised to increase competitiveness between plants, limit the production per vine and guarantee better grape quality. Careful vineyard management enables Lungarotti to favour accumulation and preservation of water resources, encouraging the roots to grow deeper into the soil as they search for water and nutritional elements, making the vines more resistant in case of drought. The Lungarotti wines are the centerpiece of their empire, alongside their prestigious tourist centre, wine museum, shops and wine bars – collectively, the estate is a stunning promotional tool not only for Lungarotti, but for the whole region. Today the company is run by sisters Chiara Lungarotti and Teresa Severini. Their commitment and openness to innovation have continued the strong ethos of Lungarotti - family stewardship as a guarantee not only of the present but also the future.

Rubesco: A symbol of Umbria

The wines history reflects the Lungarotti winery. Innovative for its time – the early 1960's – it became immediately well known: a lovely wine with clear-cut personality. Its brilliant ruby colour and characteristics are like the Umbrians, reserved but generous. It originated from a new way to grow the vine and from selected traditional varietals, no longer vinified approximately but scientifically: a creation of Giorgio's, of which he was proud.

DECUGNANO DEI BARBI

Decugnano dei Barbi

The origin of the name Decugnano is obscure and dates back centuries, lost in time. Since the distant year of 1212, the lands of Decugnano have been producing wine, destined for the clergy of Orvieto. Claudio Barbi bought the abandoned land in 1973 and began planting the first vineyards and building the winery. Claudio's son, Enzo, continues his father's work today with the same passion and dedication.

In a place of unique characteristics, the vineyards of Decugnano dei Barbi take shape among oceanic seabeds from 3 million years ago. The power of time and nature merge with the wisdom of man, creating an unparalleled mineral and marine terroir, giving life to extraordinary wines.

Lazio

Like many Italian wine regions, Lazio's (also known as 'Latium') heritage is ancient and dates back to Etruscan and Roman times. The city of Rome has shaped the region's viniculture for centuries, beginning with the improvements brought on by the Romans to the instatement of Rome as the capital in the 1870s.

Lazio is located in central Italy, and is home to volcanic hills which allow for fertile soils rich in potassium and well suited for the growth of grapes, especially white as they ensure a good balance of acidity. The cool breezes from the Tyrrhenian Sea help to balance the dry, warm temperatures on the coast. The Apennine Mountains protect the region from the cold winds coming from the north-east.

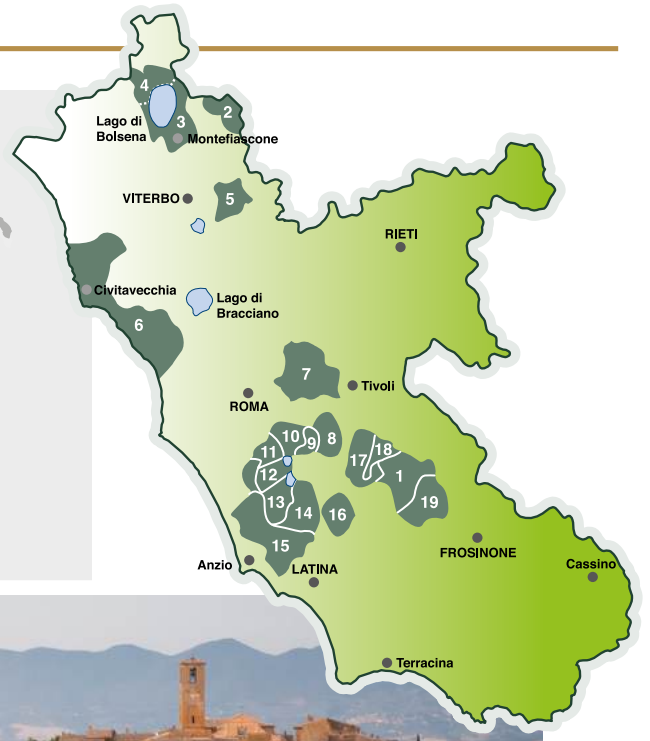

White wines are the most prominent in Lazio, making up 24 out of the 27 DOCs produced there. Due to modern vinification methods, the white wines there are light, dry and crisp, designed for drinking young. Red wines, though not as well-known, are beginning to develop a name for themselves as well.

CANTINA TOLLO

Abruzzo

Abruzzo is located in central Italy, stretching from the Apennine Mountains to the Adriatic Sea. Although geographically central, it is sometimes considered part of Southern Italy given its historic association with Sicily. Winemaking dates back to the sixth century B.C. when the Etruscans introduced viniculture to the area.

The geographical makeup of Abruzzo ranges from rugged mountains, a long coastline, and lush forests that account for the abundant sunshine and rainfall, as well as varying climates which are ideal for grape growing. Due to the cool mountain air and varying daily temperatures, along with greater rainfall with increased altitude, grape vines flourish. The majority of vineyards are found in the hilly areas, which benefit from a range of calcareous clay soils as well as soils of iron and limestone mix.

In the last 40-50 years, Abruzzo has seen a revival in viniculture, with quality-driven and boutique wines becoming more prominent in recent times. Home to one DOCG and 8 DOCs, the native red Montepulciano and white Trebbiano dominate the grape varieties used in winemaking, with some influence by other native and some international varieties. In 2008, Tullum was named the first territorial DOC in Abruzzo. Also the smallest DOC in Italy, bottling is only allowed within the area of Tollo.

Cantina Tollo

Cantina Tollo

The Cantina Tollo co-operative was founded in 1960. It has 620 members and 2,500 hectares of vineyards. Although predominantly specialising in indigenous grape varieties, Cantina Tollo have recently planted Chardonnay, Pinot Grigio, Merlot and Cabernet.

The co-operative has developed into the impressive entity it is today because from the outset the founding members dedicated themselves to quality. Over the last few decades, Cantina Tollo have worked tirelessly and invested substantially to improve the quality of the grapes and subsequently the wines they produce.

Tollo now produces over 15 million bottles of wine and exports throughout the globe.

Success, however, is not only measured by quantity. Cantina Tollo has received consistent national and international recognition - Awarded best co-operative in Italy from 2019 to 2025. For quality, notably Tre Bicchieri at the Gambero Rosso for the Mo', Montepulciano d'Abruzzo Riserva 2017 to 2021.

Campania

Campania, located in southern Italy, is known for its stunning coasts and rich history as it is one of the oldest Italian regions. Shaped by the influence of the Greeks, Romans, and Byzantines, many grape varieties are linked to historical legends. Campania is also famous for producing Falerno, which is one of the most ancient wines in Italy.

The varied climates and terroirs in Campania account for approximately 46,800 hectares of vines grown in the region. Hot, dry summers, mild winters, abundant sunshine, and rich volcanic soil allow for a long growing season. Additionally, the cool breezes from the Tyrrhenian Sea help to temper the heat, which encourages balanced acidity in the grapes. Traditionally, wines in the region display fruity, youthful styles, are intended for immediate consumption and require little ageing.

Campania is home to over 100 native grape varieties, including Fiano which was used by the Romans, Greco and Aglianico, first introduced by the Greeks. These native grapes are essential in the making of the regions DOCG and DOC classifications. Because of improved harvesting methods and cellar techniques there has been an increase in the amount of DOC wines produced over the last few decades. Both red and white varieties have become more notable and are very highly regarded.

Sella delle Spine

Sella delle Spine is a family owned winery in Taurasi, Irpinia - a region in Campania which is famous for its Aglianico grape. The winery was founded in 1970 by the Caggiano family with deep rooted wine traditions of Irpinia and the production of high quality wines made from estate grown grapes that have been recognised internationally with multiple awards for authenticity, elegance and depth. The name Sella delle Spine is inspired by the natural shape of the land , which is unusual for the for the area which resembles a horses saddle – a natural amphitheatre that embraces the vineyards bordered by roses that grow between the vines. The winery focusses on natural sustainable practices respecting the natural wine making process, with each vineyard with its own soil composition and microclimate. Since 2022, the estate has been officially certified in Italy as certified organic and also showing commitment to sustainability and biodiversity in Irpinia. Today Luigi Caggiano and his children continue their commitment to Sella delle Spine producing distinctive wines from the unique surrounding terroir, combining respect for tradition with a forward looking approach.

VINOSÌA

Vinosìa

Vinosìa is a viticultural project of the winemaker Luciano Ercolino. The winery is located in Irpinia, Campania in southern Italy, and as early as 1887, Luciano's grandfather Francesco laid the foundations of the winery that would later become Vinosìa. In 2004, brothers Mario and Luciano founded Vinosìa here and have since ambitiously built a young, flexible company that represents the tradition of the area with its wines. The winery produces both white and red wines focussing on native grape varieties and using modern but environmentally friendly practices using specially selected indigenous yeasts for fermentation. The white wines are aged in steel tanks to maintain their freshness and liveliness and for fermentation of the red wines, Vinosìa uses French oak barrels, in which the wines are aged for a longer period before being drawn into the bottle and re-aged in the bottle for several months. The wine cellar is carved into the hillside which provides a natural solution to guarantee constant temperature as the wine ages and saving energy. An ecological approach that blends architecture and landscape harmoniously.

LUCIANO ERCOLINO

Luciano Ercolino is a prominent Italian winemaker and founder of the Vinosia winery within the Irpinia sub region of Campania in Southern Italy. Luciano is from a family with over 130 years of wine making heritage and his wines are celebrated for using native grape varieties that are grown at high altitude, volcanic soils and deliver exceptional depth and clarity. The wines are produced from 100 hectares and the winery was born from the desire to “make wine our way” focussing only on native grape varieties and using modern but environmentally friendly practices. In the vineyard, low-impact practices are preferred, with green manure and minimal chemical treatments, while in the cellar, indigenous yeasts selected from the vineyard are used, along with gentle micro-oxygenation in French oak barrels, which are renewed to create an excellent balance to the wine collection.

Puglia

Puglia, or Apulia, is located at the south-eastern tip of the Italian peninsula and forms the “heel” of the Italian boot. Consisting of broad plains and low-lying hills, it is the least mountainous region in Italy. The region shows cultural and geographical differences in the north and the south; while the north is slightly hillier and more connected to the customs and winemaking practices of central Italy, the south is completely flat and maintains its strong connection to its Greco-Roman heritage.

The hot, dry Mediterranean climate found in Puglia, coupled with frequent sunshine and occasional breezes from the Adriatic Sea allow for near-perfect grape-growing conditions. While there are not many rivers to be found in the region, its limestone foundation is permeated by rainfall and gives way to underground watercourses that hydrate the iron-rich soils.

Puglia produces the most wine out of the Italian regions, typically making up about 17% of the national total. Wine was originally mass-produced in the region, though modern consumers began to demand quality over quantity and as such, DOCG and DOC produced wine has risen steadily. Grapes unique to the area are grown in the south, which is seen by some as the “true” Puglia. Red varieties, especially those made with Negroamaro, dominate the region’s DOC classifications.

LEONE DE CASTRIS

Leone de Castris

The Leone de Castris winery is based in Salice Salentino and is an intrinsic part of the history of wine-making in the Southern Italian region of Puglia.
The estate was founded in 1665 by Duke Oronzo, Earl of Lemos. After being enchanted by the landscape of Puglia he decided to sell all his properties in Spain, and dedicated himself to making great wine from the rich terroir of Salento.
He began by planting new vines, olive trees and wheat on the 5,000 hectares of property which spanned Salice, Guagnano, Veglie, Villa Baldassarri, Novoli and San Pancrazio.
“Five Roses”, the now famous rosé made by Leone de Castris, was first produced in 1943, and was the first rosato to be bottled in Italy. Its name comes from a “contrada” (neighbourhood), belonging to the family, so called, because for several generations each de Castris had five children.
During the 1960s, the direction of the company was in the hands of Cavaliere del Lavoro Salvatore Leone de Castris, and thanks to his efforts the winery developed both locally and internationally.
The philosophy of continuous improvement is now driven on by his son, Piernicola Leone de Castris, who has been Managing Director since the late 1990's.
Leone de Castris have always been pioneers in spreading the richness of Salento's viticulture all over the world. With 350 years of history, they are looking towards the future.

Sardinia

Sardinia is a large island off the western coast of mainland Italy, and is the second largest in the Mediterranean other than Sicily. As an autonomous region that is situated a considerable distance from the other Italian regions, it has developed its own distinct culture and identity. Winemaking is not a historic part of Sardinian culture as it has been in the rest of Italy, and the wines produced there bear little resemblance to those from the other regions.

The terroir in Sardinia is very well suited to viniculture. There is much topographical diversity and climate variation between the hills, plains, and coastal regions. Additionally, the nutrients in the soils vary from mineral-rich clays to free-draining sands with bedrocks of granite, limestone, and sandstone. Many of the grapes grown in the region have French and Spanish origins, or are varieties exclusive to the region. Some of these varieties, such as Nuragus and Monica, feature their own DOCs.

Only a small portion of Sardinia's land is devoted to grapevines, though Italian wine authorities are working to develop the island's wine potential. Sardinia currently has the lowest wine production per hectare of any wine region, but some producers are creating high-quality wines that are recognised on a wider scale. The majority of vineyards in the region lie to the west where most of the DOCs are also found, however Vermentino di Gallura DOCG (one of four white DOCGs in Italy) is produced in the north east of Sardinia.

ARGIOLAS

The renowned oenologist Professor Giacomo Tachis, who sadly passed away in February 2016, was involved with the winery for over a decade and is responsible for creating Turriga, which is today considered to be one of Italy's best red wines. The Argiolas winery has always preferred to concentrate on indigenous Sardinian grape varieties, and they are responsible for a resurgence of interest in Bovale Sardo.
The estate comprises 230 hectares and is located in Serdiana, Trexenta and Sulcis.

Fifty years ago, we began to work on ermentino in purity. We have enhanced its freshness; we have emphasized the depth of its tones. We have revealed its greatness. We are in Gallura, where the sea breeze blows, and the land is the daughter of granite. We are the custodians. The custodians of a precious territory, of a millenary tradition, of the history of a vine that we have restored to prosperity and made famous throughout the world. Our wines are born here, from vine and cellar, in the same land: there are only a few steps between the vine and the barrel. We have always respected the environment because we are part of it and we know how fragile and precious it is. We bring this care and attention to every stage of our work: excellence in wine can only come from respect. We are part of a story that began with the intuit ion and tenacity of a family, the first to believe in Vermentino di Gallura.
Today in this story you will find the dream and signature of Carlo Bonomi, a person of reference in the world of Italian and Sardinian wines. We are the custodians of a land and its wines, through time.

Sicily

Sicily is an autonomous region of Italy, and the largest island in the Mediterranean Sea. The region has been significant in winemaking for over 2500 years and boasts near perfect growing conditions. There is consistent sunshine, moderate rainfall, and a hilly landscape which provides an ideal terroir for wine-bearing grape vines. Mount Etna, which is Europe's tallest active volcano, is responsible for the mineral-rich, volcanic soils that dominate the area to the east.

Sicily has more vineyards than any other Italian region, and competes with Puglia for the largest wine producer. Vineyards in the east of Sicily are now planted high up on the volcanic slopes so as to take advantage of the cool air and rich soils present there. To the west the volcanic hills may not be as dramatic, but still influence the soil types.

In recent years, quality-focused attitudes have led to Sicilian winemakers producing better wines that have gained more notice internationally. Many grapes grown in Sicily are made into raisins and used in cooking, or used in creating dessert wines. Dessert wines are renowned in Sicily, in particular the famous Marsala wine. In fact, 90% of all DOC production in the region is made up of dessert wines. Red and white wines are also respected as well, including natives Nero d'Avola and Grecanico.

CUSUMANO

Cusumano

From day one, the philosophy behind Cusumano has been to emphasise the importance of terroir.
Cusumano was established in 2000 when brothers Alberto and Diego took over from their father, who had been growing grapes for 40 years.
The estate comprised 140 hectares of prime vineyard locations throughout Sicily which, within recent years, has grown to 502 hectares.
In 2004, they expanded again with the acquisition of a new holding in San Giacomo, in the territory of Buttera, to the south of the island.
The brothers have assembled a team that has a rich experience in viticulture and above all an absolute passion for winemaking.
Because of their intimate knowledge of the Sicilian terroir, Diego and Alberto have been able to find prime vineyard locations throughout Sicily.
These vineyards allow maximum expression of not only indigenous Sicilian grape varieties but of international varietals that, according to Diego, evolve to take on their own Sicilian identity.
The Cusumano family have invested heavily in technology, and have fully renovated the old cantina to create a state of the art winery built around the ancient baglio.

France

France has a strong claim for the richest wine heritage of all the wine producing countries and is home to the classic wine regions of the world including Champagne, Burgundy and Bordeaux. From the cool, chalky-soiled north to the sunny thyme-scented south, it boasts virtually every grape-growing condition and is home to over 200 grape varieties. It is the source of many of the world's most recognised and widely planted grapes varieties (Cabernet Sauvignon, Chardonnay, Pinot Noir, Sauvignon Blanc & Syrah) and is the birthplace of the notion of 'terroir' and the AOC classification system.
France competes only with Italy as the largest wine producing country in the world, producing over 50 to 60 million hectolitres of wines (or 7 to 8 billion bottles) per year.

Champagne Abel Lepitre

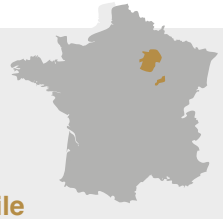

It was in the village of Ludes that Abel Lepitre established the Champagne House in 1924 that to this day carries his name. Coming from a long line of winemakers, Abel Lepitre skilfully mastered the art and techniques of vinification and champagnisation. He successfully produced Champagnes that quickly came to hold an enviable place in the domestic and foreign market.

From 1945, Jacques Lepitre gave a new impetus to the family Champagne house and established and developed the brand's reputation for fine Champagne in the restaurant trade.

Grands vins de Chablis

Domaine de Oliveira Lecestre

The Domaine de Oliveira Lecestre estate, a family concern born in 1955, is situated in Fontenay-près-Chablis, in the north-east of the Chablis region, on the right bank of the Serein River.

For the first ten or so years the founder, Mr De Oliveira, worked for neighbouring winegrowers while tending his own vineyards at the same time.

In 1965 he decided to focus exclusively on his estate of 7 hectares, and went into partnership with his brother-in-law, Mr Lecestre, in order to expand. They continued to increase the size of the estate, planting vines, investing in new buildings and buying high-clearance tractors to improve productivity and facilitate work in the vineyard.

In 1997 Mr De Oliveira took well-deserved retirement and his daughter took over the running of the business. Her father remains active on the estate where his advice is always welcomed. In 2004 his granddaughter joined the team, making the third generation to date to work on the estate.

There are currently 48 hectares of vines, spread across the four Chablis denominations: 8.44 hectares of Petit Chablis, 34.99 hectares of Chablis, 4.29 hectares of Chablis Premier Cru and 0.28 hectares of Chablis Grand Cru.

Domaine la Colombe rosé is a part of AOP Coteaux Varois en Provence wines. Located in the commune of Saint-Maximin-la-Sainte-Baume, the area covers approximatelly 30 hectares. The altitude of the vineyards varies somewhere between 360 and 420 meters above sea level. The soil is largely clay and limestone in the valleys. Most areas under cultivation are composed of bauxite, sand and marble especially in those areas adjacent to Sainte Victoire.
The wines from this region are mainly produced by bleeding process of the grapes.
The rose has a grapefruit pink color. On the nose, a touch of brioche, fermentation stands out on the aromas of young fruits. The palate is clean, pretty, and well- balanced with a nice freshness on the finish.

Spain

Spain has over 2.9 million acres (over 1.17 million hectares) of vineyards making it the most widely planted wine producing nation. It is the third largest producer of wine in the world, behind France and Italy respectively. This is due, in part, to the very low yields and wide spacing of the old vines planted on the dry, infertile soil found in many Spanish wine regions. Wine has been produced in Spain since the first century AD. The country has undergone a wine revolution over the last twenty years and is now producing a diverse range of top quality yet great value Red, White and Rosé wines. "Look for Spain to continue to soar. Today it is emerging as a leader in wine quality and creativity, combining the finest characteristics of tradition with a modern and progressive winemaking philosophy." Robert Parker

South Africa

Generally thought to be one of the world's most beautiful wine regions, South Africa must also win awards for the most diverse topography and biodiversity, all attributes that are celebrated and maximised by South African winegrowers. Here, sustainability alongside quality is keenly protected. Today South Africa exports around 450 million litres of wine with over 100,000 hectares of vineyard and is the 9th largest producer of wine in the world. The top five grape varieties in South Africa are Chenin Blanc, Cabernet Sauvignon, Colombard, Shiraz and Sauvignon Blanc. Chenin Blanc is still king in South Africa, although around 40% of vineyards were replanted in recent years and there is a notable shift from 80% white grapes to a split that is nearly 50/50 red and white. Despite its African geography, the Cape winelands, situated at the Southernmost tip of Africa, enjoy a Mediterranean climate with cool, wet winters and warm dry summers. The mountain slopes and valleys form the ideal habitat for the wine grape, Vitis Vinifera, and the sea breezes from the Atlantic and Indian oceans cool the vineyards during the warm summer afternoons, slowing the ripening process and creating the intense fruit flavours that are so popular with lovers of South African wines.

Australia

Vines first arrived to the world's largest island in 1788 and today Australia has more than 420,000 acres under vine producing more than 1.46 billion bottles of wine per year. The principal wine regions in Australia by volume are South Australia, New South Wales and Victoria with by far the largest area of wine production being South Australia. Shiraz holds the title of main grape of Australia with Chardonnay now the second most planted variety. Today however there are more than 100 different grape varieties planted throughout Australia including among others; Pinot Gris, Riesling, Viognier, Tempranillo and Sangiovese. Recently, wine styles here are changing dramatically too with a move by winemakers towards expressing the rich terroir of the country, producing 'artisan' style wines. In terms of climate, much of Australia is far too hot for vine cultivation so vineyards are principally located along the slightly cooler coastline to the South of the country.

New Zealand

New Zealand extends 1,600km (1000 miles) from sub-tropical Northland (36° S) to the world's most southerly grape growing region Central Otago (47° S). Vineyards benefit from the moderating effect of the maritime climate (no vineyard is more than 120km, or 80 miles, from the ocean) with long sunshine hours and nights cooled by sea breezes. New Zealand wine is distinctive for its purity, vibrancy and intensity. The long ripening period - a result of cool temperatures - allows flavour development whilst retaining fresh acidity, a balance for which New Zealand wines are renowned. New Zealand produces less than 1% of the world's wine and is largely produced in ten major wine growing regions. They are, from north to south Northland, Auckland, Waikato/Bay of Plenty, Gisborne, Hawke's Bay, Wellington, Nelson, Marlborough, Canterbury/Waipara and Central Otago. New Zealand is home to what many wine critics consider the world's best Sauvignon Blanc. Oz Clarke, a well-known British wine critic, wrote in the 1990s that New Zealand Sauvignon Blanc was "arguably the best in the world".

Willow's End

Recognised internationally for its distinctive, herbaceous Sauvignon Blanc, Marlborough is New Zealand's largest winemaking region, with about 65 wineries and 290 grape growers, and over 4,000 hectares planted in grapes.
From the country's sunniest and driest region, we have carefully selected one of the best examples to include in our portfolio, a wine that benefits from these amazing conditions of sunny, but comparatively cool climate.

Argentina

The 5th largest wine producer in the world with some 497,000 acres under vine. Wine has been made here since the mid-16th century, shortly after the Spanish conquest. The most important wine regions are located in the province of Mendoza, in the foothills of the Andes, West-Central Argentina. Here, Malbec particularly thrives in its adopted home. Thanks to the high altitude and low humidity, Argentine vineyards rarely face problems of insects, fungi, moulds and other diseases.

The Villafañe family has been in the wine business for almost 400 years. Their ancestor Don Manuel Villafañe came to Argentina in 1611 from Spain as a soldier. He settled in South America as a farmer and became a pioneer of wine-making in Argentina as he was one of the first people to plant vines in the territory.
Today the estate comprises 80 hectares and consists of two vineyards: Finca Don Manuel Estate (50 ha) and Finca la Hermita (30 ha), in Mendoza.

FAMILY WINES

Chile

Vines were first brought to Chile by the Spanish Conquistadors in the mid 1500's. Since Independence, the country has maintained a thriving wine industry, initially for its domestic market and since the mid-1980s with rapid development as a strong export market. Chile has enviable climate conditions that are ideal for grape growing; hot summers, coastal cooling breezes, a coastal mountain range, protecting many vines from ocean dampness, and a moderate rainfall.

Today, Chile is the 5th largest exporter of wines in the world and the 7th largest wine producer. In the past few decades this could be attributed to the consistent quality and price offered by classic grape varieties (Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Sauvignon Blanc and Chardonnay) which thrive in the Central Valley and, in part, to the discovery of the near extinct grape, Carménère.

However, more recently Chilean winemakers have been experimenting with the notion of 'Terroir'; by seeking out lesser-known regions, playing with the influence of micro-climates, cool climate production, variety and clonal selection and viticultural techniques.

Siegel

The Siegel winery is rooted in the tradition and history of a family that has practiced the art of producing wine with identity for generations. Located in the Colchagua Valley, at the heart of Chile's renowned wine country, the winery is dedicated to producing high-quality wines that authentically express their origin. Each bottle reflects the unique local terroir—a combination of soil, climate, and topography that makes the region ideal for distinctive winemaking.

Today, Viña Siegel cultivates over 700 hectares of vineyards across seven estates, strategically located at the foothills of the Andes in Los Lingues, the higher coastal zones of Peralillo, and near the Pacific Ocean in the Leyda Valley—each contributing distinctive attributes that define the wines' complexity and expression.
